1

Medical Center Library Learning Resource Center

On the second floor of the Margaret McCormick Doisy Learning Resources Center, the Medical Center Library is a popular resource for students pursuing health professions on the south side of Saint Louis University's campus. In addition to reference materials, the library has liaison librarians dedicated to supporting students in the School of Medicine, School of Nursing, Doisy College of Health Sciences, and the College for Public Health and Social Justice.

2

Trudy Busch Valentine School of Nursing

Located along Caroline Mall on the south side of Saint Louis University's campus in Kevyn Schroeder Hall, the School of Nursing offers not only classroom and lecture space but also hands-on learning opportunities. The building features two replicas of hospital units, four model exam rooms, 16 hospital beds and two control rooms where instructors behind one-way glass operate manikins that simulate symptoms, diseases and conditions found in a real-care setting. In addition to other resources, the building also includes a separate simulation lab that prepares students for the unique challenges of providing home health care. The lab is designed as a fully functional apartment with a kitchen, living room, bedroom and bathroom.

Doisy College of Health Sciences in the Allied Health Professions Building

Located east of Theresa Avenue, between Caroline and Rutger streets, SLU's Allied Health Building is home to the Doisy College of Health Sciences. The popular student-run Fresh Gatherings Café is located in the lower level. The building also features Doisy College of Health Sciences' applied learning spaces, including a gait lab, culinary lab, diagnostic lab, radiation therapy simulation lab and media labs.

4

Health Sciences Education Union

Situated at Carr Lane Ave and Rutger St, just north of the School of Nursing, the Education Union is home to a state-of-the-art auditorium, a large lounge and a dining option. The second floor is designed like a doctors' office suite, with a waiting room and exam rooms, for use by students in patient care simulations. The Health Sciences Education Union is a popular study spot for students on the south campus.
