

Sinquefield Center News

Dillon Fuchsman, a post-doc at SCAER, was chosen as a 2022 Emerging Education Policy Scholar by the Fordham Institute and the American Enterprise Institute. Candidates who are selected for this highly competitive program spend several days in Washington DC, all expenses paid, attending seminars and meeting important members of the education research and education policy community. Previous generations of scholars in this program have moved on to leading positions in the academic and education research community.